"Hold this book of poems to your inner ear as you held the seashells of your childhood to your outer ear, and you shall more than meet Melville, more than merely hear him. By this superbly evocative collection you will see hear, smell, and touch his world and explore the seas of life on which Melville and his shipmate, poet Laurie Robertson-Lorant sail." — Everett Hoagland, author of ...Here...New and Selected Poems

The Man Who Lived Among the Cannibals is a sequence of thirty-seven persona poems fusing fact and fiction, reality and imagination, profundity and humor. Biographer-poet Laurie Robertson-Lorant creates a vivid poetic memoir of Herman Melville, the adventurous sailor and author of Typee, Moby-Dick, Benito Cereno, Billy Budd and many other works of prose and poetry. Imagine Melville talking with Frederick Douglass about whaling, witness his erotic adventures in the South Seas, hear what the gossips say about him, see him comparing notes on history and politics with George Orwell in the belly of a whale. Even Melville's wife Elizabeth has her say. This provocative and accessible poetic portrait is bound to draw new readers to Melville's writings as well to Laurie Robertson-Lorant's eminently readable Melville: A Biography.

About the Author

Laurie Robertson-Lorant is the author of Melville: A Biography, the only up-to-date, full-length, complete and fully annotated biography of Melville in one volume. After teaching at Berkshire Community College, St. Mark's School, Southborough, School Year Abroad, France, and MIT, Dr. Lorant is currently a Full-Time Visiting Lecturer at the University of Massachusetts Dartmouth. Her poems have appeared in the Atlanta Review, Birmingham Poetry Review, Black Buzzard Review, Earth's Daughters, Igitur, Intuitions, Leviathan, Oxalis, Radcliffe Quarterly, Rockhurst Review, Sandscript, Scriptis, Sing, Heavenly Muse, Southcoast Poetry Journal, The American Voice, The North American Review, and The Worcester Review, and in several anthologies: October Mountain: An Anthology of Berkshire Writers, edited by Paul Metcalf, Sad Little Breathings and Other Ventriloquisms, edited by Heather McHugh, and We Speak for Peace, edited by Ruth Jacobs.
